

New Bay Bridge span: 2 minutes, 3 years of building

January 8, 2013 4:00 pm by Lance Knobel

After 11 years of construction, and 23 years after the Loma Prieta earthquake took part of it out, the new eastern span of the Bay Bridge is nearly done. Caltrans plans to open the bridge to traffic this September. While we wait for the opening, the Metropolitan Transportation Commission has released a fascinating 2-minute timelapse video of construction since 2009, put together from EarthCam's webcam footage. It makes it look so easy.