

What a massive construction project looks like in time-lapse video (WATCH)

By Karen Workman

04/24/2013 05:52:17 AM MDT

Two years of construction on a massive project is boiled down to less than two minutes in a time-lapse video.

On Thursday, former President George W. Bush and his wife, Laura, will be at the dedication ceremony for the George W. Bush Center in Dallas. The center includes a 226,000-square-foot building and 15-acre urban park.

It's been two years in the making — two years that earthcam.net spent documenting with more than 156,000 high-definition images and more than 20,000 hours of video. All that was pieced together for a cool video showing the project from beginning to end in less than two minutes.

The center will open to the public on May 1 and will be home to the Bush Presidential Library and Museum, as well as the Bush Institute. It'll be the 13th presidential library.

Read more about the center, which is located on the campus of Southern Methodist University.

