

The Dallas Morning News

Watch Houston Hobby Airport's new international terminal be built in 90 seconds

Conor Shine Published: March 17, 2016 2:29 pm

It took nearly two years to build Southwest Airlines' new international terminal at Houston Hobby Airport, but you can watch it go up in less than two minutes.

A timelapse video released by EarthCam on Thursday shows a pile of rubble transform into the sleek, glass-encased five-gate terminal over the course of 90 seconds.

Southwest footed the entire $146 million price tag for the new terminal, which opened in October, and currently uses all five gates there for flights to Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean.