WHAT: The big game, and arguably the biggest sporting event of the year, is right around the corner. On Super Bowl Sunday, the Denver Broncos and Seattle Seahawks will go head to head at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey for the chance to win the coveted Vince Lombardi trophy. Serving as the new home field for the New York Giants and New York Jets since April 2010, EarthCam's construction cameras documented progress of the stadium and shared the entire process with a dynamic time-lapse movie.

WHY: EarthCam's time-lapse movie highlights progress from August 7, 2007 to March 7, 2010, inviting sports fans to watch as this $1.6 billion vision comes to life in just 50 seconds. This special time-lapse is the perfect way to kick-off (get it?!) the Super Bowl festivities, with a glance inside this year's host stadium.
