Andy Warhol's 86th birthday is being celebrated electronically Wednesday.

EarthCam is sharing images and video clips from its Figment Cam, installed last year, and partnering with The Andy Warhol Museum and St. John Chrysostom Byzantine Catholic Church to honor the late artist, a Pittsburgh native. Viewers can take a virtual tour of Warhol's hometown, from his final resting place to the church where he was baptized. Fans can remember Warhol in their own way, by sending flowers or a Campbell's Soup can to his grave site and watch the delivery live.

EarthCam's FigmentCam Pop Art creates one-of-a-kind images using an electronic program similar to Warhol's silk-screen process. The images are only famous for 15 minutes and feature bold color combinations, reminiscent of Warhol's work.
