The screenshot shows a live stream from EarthCam titled "Wrigley Field Cam". The main video displays a large crowd of fans gathered outside Wrigley Field stadium. The stadium's facade is visible, featuring a large sign that reads "WRIGLEY FIELD HOME OF CHICAGO CUBS" and "WORLD SERIES CHAMPIONS". A Toyota logo is also visible on the stadium's exterior. The interface includes navigation options such as "Hall of Fame", "EarthCam Network", and "Services for Business". Below the main video, there are "RELATED CAMS" for Chicago, IL, St. Joseph, MI, and Romeoville, IL. A promotional banner at the bottom reads "Let's Play Ball at Wrigley Field!" and features the Sports World Chicago logo.

Want to experience the madness that will be Wrigleyville this Friday without actually being in Wrigleyville? EarthCam will be livestreaming Games 3 & 4 of the World Series right outside of Wrigley Field. In fact, it's live now if you want to see what's happening at the home of the Chicago Cubs. You can bet that scene will be absolute BEDLAM this weekend.

If you do want to go? Tickets (resale, of course) are available for Friday's game for only $1,800 to $20,000 or Saturday's game for a mere $2,100 to $22,750.

Those are affiliate links, so if you buy a ticket I'll make one billion dollars, at no extra cost to you.
